ABOUT THIS WORKSHOP

This one-day workshop will blend cutting-edge neurobiology with treatment strategies supporting a range of professionals, clinicians, educators and caregivers who serve the Autism Spectrum Disordered population. Deeper and current understanding of the mechanisms of the brain-body science of ASD will support participants in making evidence informed choices of treatments for individual clients across a wide range of treatment modalities.

Learning Objectives:

1. The learner will develop a preliminary understanding of the current science of genetic/environmental interaction in the development of ASD.
2. The learner will begin to understand the science of sensory regulation, neuroplasticity and therapeutic intervention.
3. The learner will develop an understanding of how the immune system and the brain interact and how this affects behavior.
4. The learner will be introduced to treatment techniques to support regulation (sensory, cognitive and emotional).

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

This workshop is intended for professionals who work with children with autism including occupational therapists, special education teachers, physiotherapists, speech language pathologists, dietitians, early intervention specialists and other professionals working with this population.
